Ecological Restoration Certification Class

Participants will Meet the People,
Tour the Locations,
Experience the Species,
Have some Outdoor Fun and Take part in the projects of Ecological Restoration of the Southwestern Ohio Ecoregion

The ecological restoration training is a 5 year old project created to study existing community standards and how they interact with the infrastructure of ecosystems. The fundamental purpose of the training is to establish standards for ecological restoration for the Southwestern, Ohio ecoregion.

The restoration training is designed to connect the professional with issues within the community and the members of the community with professional interests.

The course is especially designed for land managers, nature educators, teachers, watershed managers, city planners, landscape architects, native gardeners, as well as, traditional gardeners.
